

You can lead a horse to water,
but you can't make it drink.

It means you can give someone the opportunity to learn or to do something, but you can never force him or her to accept that opportunity.

When I was small, my parents bought a huge piano for me. A famous piano teacher also came to my house to give me lessons.

However, I was not interested in playing the piano and never learned how to play it.

Instead I loved reading poetry and drawing pictures.
